SKELETON OF THE SILVERED BEAUTY

LYING PRONE AT CALDWELL VANDALS ROB MERCILESSLY

Commander Landsdowne of the ill-fated Airship Shenandoah Died In the Line of His Duty Inquiry Held By the Naval Board Holds—He Passed Away Leaning Up Against a Fence Post By the Side of His Wrecked Ship.

With stubborn pride of the air service and in the face of facts developed by their own investigation, the naval board of inquiry Friday night maintained faith in the Shenandoah.

But facts, fatal to the theory of dirigible air craft were admitted by the board after it had viewed the skeleton of the silvered beauty, as she lay scattered fragments over the hot Ohio farm lands.

The investigation proved:

1—The Shenandoah was in perfect mechanical condition when she was tossed on the shoulders of a terrific line squall Thursday morning.

2—Officers and crew exercised the greatest navigating skill and maintained perfect discipline.

3—Under similar conditions a duplicate of the Shenandoah would meet a similar fate. No human agency could prevent it.

"Doesn't that mean the end of all dirigibles in this country?" Lieutenant Commander Jacob Klein, chief of the investigation board, was asked. "Just the contrary," he exclaimed. "Call the whole tragedy an act of God if you like, but I hate to blame it on God."

"But it doesn't destroy faith in the Shenandoah and dirigibles. It is just as if you walked across a street sober and in perfect control of your faculties. An automobile kills you."

"So with the Shenandoah. By accident it met a line-storm that was to it what an automobile would be to a pedestrian."

"I ask nothing better than to build another Shenandoah and fly it. I'd feel perfectly safe."

"It was our own American built machine. Just as strong and sturdy as the German built Los Angeles."

"As for the immediate circumstances which Commander Landsdowne and his men faced just before they went to their—that we shall probably never know."

"The ship log has been lost. Probably in the hands of a souvenir hunter. But we are hunting for it."

The hunt for the log and facts to clear up the disaster of Thursday led Commander Klein and his aids from the Lakehurst naval station over a tragic trail.

From Peter Nierwasser, in whose cornfield near Ava, where the dying Commander Landsdowne was found propped against a bloody fence post, along the wooded gully where bodies had poured from the shattered Shenandoah, Klein and his aids tracked a pathway of blood.

But the sneak thief, shoulder to shoulder with the good Samaritan, had preceded them by twenty-four hours.

Before the local American Legion, which stood guard over the property that arrived after the crash, the steel skeletons of the two giant fragments had been stripped of its silvered silk casing.

"I've enough for twenty raincoats," one looter exclaimed as he loaded an automobile with yards of the covering.

In addition to looting, malicious vandalism interfered with work of the investigators. Several of the gas shells, which cost $15,000 had been ripped by the jackknife of some farmer's boy.

Commander Klein broke into anger as he saw the malicious destruction of the beauty of the air which he had once commanded.

"I wish they'd understand, these people, that they've got lots of things which are worthless to them, but invaluable to me. I must have the ship's log, the barograph and the radio record to help me find out what happened."

A chance remark dropped in a barber shop and overheard by a reporter traced the radio records. A map was found thru the efforts of the local druggists. Friday a detachment of regulars from Fort Hayes arrived and guarded the property.

Around them swarmed the thousands who motored thru the dusty country roads of the sparsely settled country to view the catastrophe.

From the sightseers, the farmers reaped a financial harvest. Admission was charged to rugged sheep pastures from which the wreck could be viewed. Concessionaires established hot dog and tonic booths. Parking space jumped from nothing to a half dollar and then to a dollar.

Only one group of natives was financially despondent. Those were the backers of the county fair. The prize oxen and milk cows went unnoticed as all the little world of farmers here centered about the two scenes of the wreck.

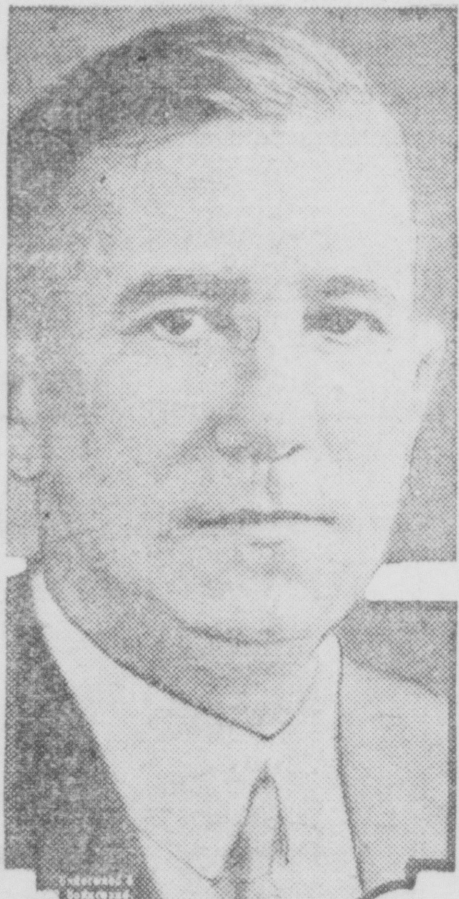

Commander Klein, four other officers and the village coroner gathered in the garage of Belle Valley. There in a temporary morgue lay the bodies of fourteen victims.

The officers identified bodies of brother officers and those of men who had served under them. The entire ceremony lasted no longer than twenty minutes.

Then came the verdict.

"Death in the line of duty, not due to misconduct."

FIRE LOSS AT MID WEST BOX PAPER MILLS

Blaze Probably Started From
Lighted Match Carelessly
Thrown in Yard.

The fire that broke out in the ricks of baled straw at the yards of the Mid-West Box and Paper mill Friday noon was the most stubborn fire that the department has had to fight in its existence.

The flames started in a portion of the yard adjacent to Mill street at noon and fanned by a wind from the southwest, it ate its way to two ricks of baled straw containing over two thousand tons. Both the booster and the big pumper played six streams of water on the fire all afternoon and finally succeeded in getting it under control, altho it will probably burn for a week. The fire was confined to the two ricks.

Superintendent Charles Raney and a force of men, assisted the department in handling the hose and controlling the big blaze. The heat was intense and this added to the sun's temperature made the place a fiery furnace. Both fire fighting machines were in service, and the water supply was drawn from the company's big well. The company has an intake from the river and the capacity of the mill's big pumps was put to their full capacity.

Chief Baer also had a line of hose connected with the city's supply. Mayor Fitzpatrick was at the scene, gave directions and ordered down the big pumper to assist.

Superintendent Raney is of the opinion that one of the men in leaving work at noon unthoughtfully threw down a lighted match which he had used to light a cigaret and that the blaze once started was fanned by the wind and crept up to the big ricks of straw, which are piled fifty feet high. This theory is borne out by the fact that when the men engaged in piling straw left the yards, there was no smoke visible, but hardly five minutes had elapsed when smoke was seen issuing from the piles of straw. The big ricks were pulled down so the fire fighters could reach the flames which seemed to break out everywhere.

Superintendent Raney estimates the loss at $10,000 fully covered by insurance.

FRATERNITY IN RELIGION FINE QUALITY

In the work of assembling funds for the restoration of the old mission at Santa Barbara that was badly damaged in the earthquake a few weeks ago, sectarian lines have been wiped out. Protestants and Jews are co-operating with Catholics in making possible the replacing of the historic structure just as it stood before the disaster.

The spirit of tolerance that is being manifested in this splendid co-operative work cannot fail to advance the cause of brotherhood and religion thruout the state of California. It will create a new respect for the religious forces generally. By uniting in this campaign, the people of the various faiths in California are showing the same sort of spirit shown by the people in New York in contributing to the fund for the completion of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. Both of these cooperative efforts may be accepted as signs of developing spirit of religious unity among the American people.—Houston Post-Dispatch.

AIR TRANSPORT COMPANY WILL HAUL FREIGHT

The corporation will erect their buildings adjoining their mail landing field at the Cleveland Airport in Brook park.

The company will institute a freight express and airmail line, according to Col. Paul Henderson, vice president of the company. It has ordered ten planes and will bid on the airmail routes now advertised by the government, Henderson said.

BADLY SCALDED.

While in the act of taking a pan of boiling water off the stove Friday afternoon Mrs. E. A. Allen of 211 South Scioto street, slipped and spilled the hot water on both her legs. The water ran into her shoes and she was severely scalded. The pain was made more intense by the fact that she had some difficulty in pulling off her hose before she could get relief. Home remedies were applied at once to the burns. Her condition is now better and she is recovering nicely.

Fine Thing to Appreciate the Beauty of the Section in Which You Live.

There are many tourists who will travel thousands of miles and very likely visit many foreign countries, who have not seen some notable sights in their own home locality. Very likely they have not traveled thoroughly over their own state, and do not know much about its resources and beauties.

This may not be the case so much now as it was in the days before automobiles became common, as the possession of a car does incite people to cover the distances which can be reached by trips of a day or a week end from their homes. Still, the tendency of such trips is usually to follow along the best automobile roads, and interesting localities where the roads are just ordinary may be entirely unknown.

We all ought to have a kind of state loyalty that should make us very proud of Ohio. We ought to know it, if possible, from end to end and be familiar with all its leading communities, and with their resources and history and achievements and possibilities.

There are some commonwealths where that sentiment is developed in a very marked way, and those states have made remarkable growth during recent years. The people of those states are so ardent in their loyalty that they want to know what is going on all over their state, so that they can speak intelligently about its prospects, and not have to express by mere hot air and undiscriminating enthusiasm, if they are asked to give an opinion about this or that locality.

It is a fine thing to appreciate the beauty of your own section and neighborhood. It is very enjoyable, of course, to travel widely and meet people from different sections. Yet that costs a good deal of money and one can see great deal that is very wonderful and beautiful by short journeys. —Newark Advocate.

Society Suggestion

I am obliged to a man named Cunningham for sending me a copy of a weekly newspaper printed in a town in the Southwest. It says the bachelors of the town had long been in the habit of attending social affairs given by the young married people, and caused a good deal of trouble. Several young couples separated as a result of "romance." Whereupon the young married men made a new ruling, and now the bachelors, when they long for society, find it among the unmarried. A married man, if disposed to flirt, finds a restraining influence in his wife, but a bachelor has no such handicap. I should say an old bachelor should be permitted no lady company save that of widows, who, of all women, are most capable in handling old bachelors.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Foolishness of Fear
Set Forth by Writer

"I'm afraid — I'm afraid — I'm afraid!" A million times a day we say it—"I'm afraid!" And then wonder why we have so little Success and so little Happiness!

If you spend your whole life looking for Safety, then you'll get Safety perhaps, and you'll find out how little it amounts to.

Safety isn't Success and it isn't Happiness. Safety is a negative thing. It isn't worth a bean by itself. It's not getting hurt—that's all. Yet millions of people waste their whole lives trying to be safe.

The world of business is filled with fears. It is filled with people who are hiding—dodging—running for dear life.

In business life, as well as on the battlefield, men have shellshock and spasms of fear—blind, mad, unreasoning fear.

Most business men have these spasms of fear in times of depression. Then they cancel orders and sack employees, and stop advertising and dig themselves in.

Generally it is not what does happen that frightens men, but what might happen. Most men squeal before they are hurt.

The truth is that no man can escape either criticism or risk. You can never be blameless and you can never be safe, so why worry about it.

Face your fears. Walk toward them. And you'll be surprised to see how small and weak they are.

Do what you're afraid to do.

Be brave enough to buy in a slump. Be brave enough to sell in a boom. And you'll have to hire a taxi to take your profits home.

If you are in trouble, always ask: "What is the worst that can happen?" You'll usually find that the worst is not so terrible.

Courage! It is the rarest and most precious of all our real possessions. It is not taught in schools nor in churches. Every man must learn it for himself.

Danger is a tonic. It is a necessity of the inner life. You can never learn to be a good loser until you lose.

So here are unanswerable reasons why you should adopt this tip as one of the rules of your life—get rid of fear. No one can hurt you if you are true to yourself.—Herbert N. Casson in Forbes Magazine.

The Adult

We adults forget. Food and drink and sleep are the realities to us. To us there is a yesterday; there will be a tomorrow. I try to go back into the dim and vasty past, but I do not find myself there. I am an adult. I have discovered philosophies that never burdened the sweet conscious honesty of childhood. I have discovered obstacles intervening between me and my God. The road to Paradise is no longer short and straight and shining; it winds among the shadows and may not lead to Paradise after all.

Complexities have entered into that gentle relationship between life and myself that had no existence in the days of babyhood. A hundred hands, atavistic and primitive, pull me in a hundred different directions; mocking voices, stilled in childhood, hurl repeated questions in my puzzled ears. Along that road to babyhood I do not find the child I was; I find only my present self. Knowledge of things I may have gained, but only a great bewilderment as to life itself.—Arthur Somers Roche, in Heart's International-Cosmopolitan.

Air Mails and Ireland

Every proposal for the inauguration of an air mail service is welcome, if for no other reason than because it turns thought away from the use of airplanes for war purposes. Hence the announcement that it is hoped to start such a service between Belfast, Ireland, and England in March next is especially gratifying because it may also tend to cement the two peoples more closely together. It is said that already two airplanes have been purchased and that a third has been ordered. With these it is intended to carry on an all-the-year-round service. This will enable letters posted in Belfast in the evening to be delivered in London by the first mail in the morning, and vice versa.—Montreal Herald.

Tax to Support Science

Commerce and Industry will be required to contribute to the financial support of a scientific research in France, if a measure passed by the chamber of deputies is also approved by the senate. The bill provides for a tax of five centimes on each 100 francs paid in salaries by industrial and commercial concerns. The sum which the tax would raise for French scientific laboratories is estimated at 14,000,000 francs a year. This is about $700,000, according to the present rate of exchange.

Corrects Receding Chins

Receding chins are now being fixed by New York surgeons. By means of a special plate, it is possible to throw the lower jaw forward, so that the molar teeth meet in their proper position. This plate has the effect of making the patient bite forward, with the result, in most cases, that the receding chin eventually becomes normal.

Boom in Italy On

People in Italy are just meeting their accumulated needs which had remained unsatisfied during and since the war, and this is giving the country its present prosperity.

Among Materials for Fall Season

Rough Woolens, Panne and Pile Velvets, Crepes Are Prominent.

There may be and is a certain amount of speculation concerning the styles of the crisp tomorrows, but the fabrics are fairly well determined. Materials, of course, according to a fashion authority in the New York Herald-Tribune, have always been established before the rest of the mode, but the more complex weaves and designs of recent seasons make the fabric the first consideration by several months of every new group of styles. For this autumn two inter-related facts stand forth as characteristic of the new materials—first the domination of the sports influence and secondly the distinctly English atmosphere about many of the new cloths.

Meyer et Cie have an attractive array of rough-surfaced woolens, usually combined with silks and having a delicious velvety nap. This house is darkening the spring colors—bois du rose, mauve, raspberry (framboise), reseda and sage greens, bright navy and natter blue, some beige and dull orange and a little black being most prominent. They make a satin-surfaced wool out of goat's hair and silk for sports, calling it capria.

Rodier, as always, has an interesting collection of autumn materials. Kasha is replaced by kasha natte, a loosely woven cloth with the beautiful cashmere weave of kasha. This artist in cloth is creating some lovely kasha duvetyns that are shaded from top to bottom for coats and dresses. One beautiful piece is shaded from black-red to pale rose, another from deep bottle green to pale sea green, and so on. The printed materials, all in one color, show their motifs very large at the bottom and gradually become smaller until at the top they are quite tiny.

Many of the new Rodier materials for winter have futuristic borders in dull colors, and his kasha is gorgeously ornamented with flowers and motifs more conventional, done in gold or silver thread. Burafyl, the beautiful French interpretation of English men's wear worsted, is being made by Rodier for many autumn sports suits, which have been made into fall garments by the Paris couturiers. Pellisine, a suede-finished cashmere, is a beautiful new Rodier fabric, and this house has also many new materials with damask patterns in faint lines of white on wool. Among the colors very dark Veronese green, a full range of blue, many grays and a deep wine red stand forth most prominently.

Belted Waist, Petticoat
Among Season's Fashions

One of the novelties incidental to the belted waist is the petticoat. This is an important revival which will have a distinct effect upon the dress silhouette. For several seasons the trend in the costume has been altogether toward elimination, and lingerie has been reduced to a minimum. Petticoats have been dispensed with almost wholly since the silk slip was introduced and the waistline lost. With the new scheme of things are being shown a great many pretty styles in petticoats. Most of these are of crepe de chine or of tub silk, and some are embroidered, done in fine needlework of one sort or another, or trimmed with lace in dainty frills and variations. It is most desirable to have a petticoat match the dress in color, but some exceedingly pretty shades, suitable to be worn with several frocks, and much white and black, are seen.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

LITERARY NOTE

"The Writer" (Boston), the

pioneer magazine for literary workers, which has been published for nearly forty years, under the same management, is to be enlarged and developed, beginning with the October number.

The staff has been re-organized, with William H. Hills, founder of the magazine, resuming his old place as editor; Margaret Gordon as assistant editor; John Gallishaw, formerly Assistant Dean of Harvard College and of the English Departments of Harvard and the University of California, as contributing editor, conducting a department showing how the Case Method can be applied to the improvement of craftsmanship in creative writing; and William Dorsey Kennedy, Assistant Dean of the Harvard School of Business Administration, as managing editor. The "Talks on Practical Authorship," by Richard Bowland Kimball will be continued, and other interesting and helpful features will be added to increase the value of "The Writer" as a magazine of practical help for all those engaged in literary work, giving them authoritative announcements—obtained directly from headquarters—about the manuscript market and the requirements of editors, with announcements of prize offers for manuscripts, articles by successful writers with advice to other writers, practical suggestions from publishers and editors, personal information about well known authors and the writers of the day, and reviews of books of special interest to literary workers. The number of reading pages will be doubled, and the price will be twenty-five cents a number, or $2.50 a year. The business office will be at 1430 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, Mass.

Small Bills in Pads
A New York broker gets new $5 and 41 bills from the bank and sends them to his stationer, who makes them up in pads. The stationer puts one white sheet on the face of the pad as a protection to the first bill underneath. The broker claims it is an easier way to carry small bills and that they never get mussed up.

Long Journey for Nothing

This is the story of an absent-minded professor. But among stories about absent-minded professors it must hold high place. The professor is J. E. Aderman. He teaches at the University of Sidney, in Australia. Recently he arrived in London as one of the delegates to the congress of the empire universities. Then Professor Aderman discovered an error. At first he was slightly puzzled, then alarmed and then probably as humorously embarrassed as it is good for a man ever to be humorously embarrassed. He found that he had miscalculated by a year the opening of the universities' congress and that it will not open till June, 1926. Professor Aderman traveled 24,000 miles before he discovered his error.

Gambler Knew How to Repay the Kindness

By AUGUSTUS SHERWIN

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"FIFTY against the dog!" shouted Matteo the marksman. "Taken," in a mere careless drawl came the reply from Arvidi, the gamester.

It was a typical Mexican scene—the interior of the chief gambling den at Truro and a critical stage of the game in progress.

Marvin Howe happened to be present amid the swarthy crew—a floating quantity in the general situation involving warfare, anxious to get North and out of it, and the opportunity just that day with a decidedly favorable change in fortune if he carried out secret instructions given to him.

The position was this: The commandant of the sectional insurgents wished to send a particular message to a co-patriot one hundred miles away. It involved a junction of the two forces. The intermediate forty leagues of territory, however, were occupied by a dangerous enemy. The chief at Truro was surrounded by enemies and spies. He had hired Howe to do some translation and had confidence in him.

Howe engaged to cross the border line and deliver his message. He was to try and find some free lance who would accompany him and bring back a reply, while he, well rewarded, returned to home, friends and fiancée—Nellie Duryea, the only Nellie in the world to him beyond the unsettled border line.

Howe had thought of Matteo and that was why he was now an inmate of the noisy gambling den.

Howe had found him at the card table pitting his money recklessly against the most daring gambler in Truro. Howe saw his last dollar go. A handsome ring was staked, then his watch and now his most faithful friend and companion, the dog. Everybody who knew Matteo knew also his dog. The animal was tiny, but fearless and very intelligent.

The cards went the rounds again. Matteo lost. Howe saw a strangely desperate glint in his eye as he arose unsteadily from the table. He turned slightly pale. Then he shrugged his shoulders and walked over and kissed the little dog asleep on a pile of newspapers. Straight as a soldier then, he walked from the room.

"It will break his heart to lose his friend," Howe told Arvidi quickly. "May I redeem him?" and he proffered fifty dollars in paper money.

"All right," nodded the gambler and then Howe snatched up the dog and rushed after his master. Howe overtook him at the street door.

"Yours," he said, placing the little pet in his arms.

Matteo stared at Howe in a dazed, uncertain way. Then his fingers gently caressed the dog. His voice broke as he comprehended what Howe had done.

"Amigo," he said, holding Howe's hand in a fervent grasp, "when my fortune turns I shall know how to repay you."

"I can help it turn just now," remarked Howe significantly. He told him that he was authorized to pay royally for his guidance and direction.

"I can pilot you safely," Matteo said—"I am your man."

The morning they left Truro Howe had noticed a man he had seen hanging around the chief's quarters dogging his footsteps. He had called the attention of Matteo to this, who had carelessly asserted that if he was one of the numerous spies in action they "would soon lose him."

However, twice in two days after they had started on the trail they caught sight of a distant figure reminding of the man they had observed at Truro.

It was early in the morning that Matteo suggested a plunge into a near creek before they lit a little fire and cooked their frugal breakfast. They had disrobed and were disporting themselves in the cool, sparkling stream, when an ominous sound echoed out—

Then, to the consternation of Howe, turning, he saw a man, the man who had shadowed him in the city, just rushing away with a camera.

"Matteo!" shouted Howe, quickly—"the spy. He has photographed the message on my back!"

"So?" observed Matteo, speedily springing ashore to where his clothes lay. It was to seize his revolver.

Crack!—followed a sure, steady aim.

Crack!—a second sharp explosion followed. Dropping the wrecked camera and holding his wounded hand, the spy disappeared.

"The message is written partly to cypher," explained Howe, "but that man might have been able to make it out after close study."

"He is doubtless one of the unscrupulous crowd infesting the province, ready to blackmail, sell secrets or betray his best friend," acceded Matteo.

They reached the end of their journey in safety and the secret message was transcribed.

Matteo returned to Truro with a rich reward awaiting him. Marvin Howe crossed the border, bound for home and his waiting fiancée, pretty Nellie Duryea.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

There Spoke Envy's Voice

The town drunkard of a small Scotch community went on an especially vehement tear. The village authorities locked him up until he had entirely recovered.

On the second day of his captivity, as he sat in his cell, thirsty beyond words, the minister, who was of a full habit of life, came to give him consolation and good advice.

They sat down side by side and the dominie read the parable of the Prodigal Son. The prisoner seemed to hang on the words. He nudged up closer and closer, bending forward until his face was almost in the minister's face, and listened.

"Please read it over once more," he said when the dominie had finished the chapter and started to close the Good Book.

Touched by this further sign or penitence, the minister read it again. "Tell me, poor man," he said when he was done, "what was it held you so close the while I was reading—was it the lesson of the Scripture or was it the words?"

"Nay, nay," said the tippler—"twas your grand breath!"

SON SUES HIS FATHER FOR AN ACCOUNTING

John K. Zurmehly Is Not Satisfied With Administration of Trust Fund.

John R. Zurmehly, son of Guy L. Zurmehly, Wednesday, by his attorney, Wilby G. Hyde, sued his father for a balance of $11,150.98, which the son claims is due him from the father as the son's guardian over and above the balance of $5,488.62, as given in the father's seventh and final account. The entire amount sought is $16,639.60, which is the total of the father's reported balance and the additional sum of $11,150.98 claimed by the son.

The son says, that on Nov. 5, 1908, when he was 6 years old, his father was appointed his guardian. On Sept. 5, 1923, the son attained his majority. The property under the guardianship was a distributive share in the estate of Henry S. Tootle, consisting of 84.41 acres of land in Deerfield township, near Clarksburg.

The son says his father as his guardian, filed seven accounts and he claims that all these accounts were fraudulent and contained manifest mistakes; that his (the son's) allowance and confirmation of the accounts being based on his acceptance of them on his father's word, without investigation by himself, due to the natural confidential relations between himself and his father, were also erroneous, being based on his father's alleged fraud.

The son further claims that his father co-mingled the son's money with his own, and used it for his (the father's) benefit; also that the father did not charge himself correctly on the interest account, or on the rent account for the use of the son's property. The son therefore asks that the accounts be opened up, set aside and held for naught and that his father be charged with, and ordered to pay the true balance to the son, with interest.—Chillicothe Gazette.

Flies Are Polite

Julian Huxley, eminent biologist, says flies are polite. A fly in a box was seen to devour a small insect, but when a female fly was placed in the box with it the next insect was killed by the male and given to his mate. Even after the female was removed, the male remembered his manners by catching another insect and saving it for the "wife."

RIO GRANDE RIVER ON RAMPAGE

El Paso, Texas, Sept. 3.—(UP.)—Five hundred persons were temporarily homeless in El Paso and vicinity today as a result of the Rio Grande breaking through its levees after a rise which exceeded that of last month. A side current two feet deep was running through the Mexican quarter here at 10 o'clock today, five blocks from the river's bed. Three outlying additions are flooded.

The American Red Cross, the Mexican Blue Cross, city and county officials, and rental agencies are providing relief for the sufferers.

Soldiers from Fort Bliss are guarding homes of refugees to prevent looting.

Most damage has been done by backwater and not more than forty homes have been wrecked. These were built of adobe.

The flood waters began receding in the city this morning and flood squads turned their attention to lower valley farming sections where much damage is anticipated when the crest of the flood reaches there.

ABSCONDING BANKER

Caught In Lone Star State—Is Enroute To Middleboro, Ky.—Left Wife and Two Children.

San Antonio, Texas, Sept. 3.—(UP.)—Taken from a bridal suite in a fashionable hotel here with his woman companion, W. E. Frazer, alias W. E. Farley, 37, is on his way back to Middleboro, Ky., in charge of Houston Ball, chief of police of Middleboro. Frazer is charged with absconding from the Citizens Bank and Trust Company of Middleboro with money and securities totaling $100,000 in value. He was cashier of the bank.

Frazer was traced in his movements through correspondence of his woman companion with her relatives. They were endeavoring to reach Mexico. The former banker left a wife and two children in Middleboro.

The woman's residence was in Lexington, Ky., although she had told officers she was the daughter of a wealthy Virginia lumber man.

About $40,000 of the securities were recovered in a safety box in a local bank. Frazer said he had bought three expensive automobiles since absconding from Middleboro July 11.

The $1,000 reward for Frazer's arrest was paid to Chief of Detectives Sam Street here.

Prince Sleeps in Park; Hopes to Win Rich Wife

Budapest.—Police seized an old man in rags who passed the night in a park sleeping on a bench, and from his papers he was found to be the former Prince Alexander Hohenloe-Oehringen. He had been wandering from one cheap place to another until he received help from a washerwoman, who gave him food and shelter out of pity. Meanwhile he asked a lawyer to find a rich wife for him, but the lawyer's endeavors were not successful.

Ex-Prince Hohenloe-Oehringen formerly served as colonel of a Bavarian cavalry regiment. In 1895 he married against his family's will; he had to renounce his right as Prince Hohenloe. The marriage was dissolved during the war. He left the German army and married in Vienna a second time, but his wife left him, it is alleged, in consequence of his having squandered her money.

SKELETON OF THE SILVERED BEAUTY

LYING PRONE AT CALDWELL VANDALS ROB MERCILESSLY

Commander Landsdowne of the ill-fated Airship Shenandoah Died In the Line of His Duty Inquiry Held By the Naval Board Holds—He Passed Away Leaning Up Against a Fence Post By the Side of His Wrecked Ship.

With stubborn pride of the air service and in the face of facts developed by their own investigation, the naval board of inquiry Friday night maintained faith in the Shenandoah.

But facts, fatal to the theory of dirigible air craft were admitted by the board after it had viewed the skeleton of the silvered beauty, as she lay scattered fragments over the hot Ohio farm lands.

The investigation proved:

1—The Shenandoah was in perfect mechanical condition when she was tossed on the shoulders of a terrific line squall Thursday morning.

2—Officers and crew exercised the greatest navigating skill and maintained perfect discipline.

3—Under similar conditions a duplicate of the Shenandoah would meet a similar fate. No human agency could prevent it.

"Doesn't that mean the end of all dirigibles in this country?" Lieutenant Commander Jacob Klein, chief of the investigation board, was asked.

"Just the contrary," he exclaimed. "Call the whole tragedy an act of God if you like, but I hate to blame it on God."

"But it doesn't destroy faith in the Shenandoah and dirigibles. It is just as if you walked across a street sober and in perfect control of your faculties. An automobile kills you."

"So with the Shenandoah. By accident it met a line-storm that was to it what an automobile would be to a pedestrian."

"I ask nothing better than to build another Shenandoah and fly it. I'd feel perfectly safe."

"It was our own American built machine. Just as strong and sturdy as the German built Los Angeles."

"As for the immediate circumstances which Commander Landsdowne and his men faced just before they went to their—that we shall probably never know."

"The ship log has been lost. Probably in the hands of a souvenir hunter. But we are hunting for it."

The hunt for the log and facts to clear up the disaster of Thursday led Commander Klein and his aids from the Lakehurst naval station over a tragic trail.

From Peter Nierwasser, in whose cornfield near Ava, where the dying Commander Landsdowne was found propped against a bloody fence post, along the wooded gully where bodies had poured from the shattered Shenandoah, Klein and his aids tracked a pathway of blood.

But the sneak thief, shoulder to shoulder with the good Samaritan, had preceded them by twenty-four hours.

Before the local American Legion, which stood guard over the property that arrived after the crash, the steel skeletons of the two giant fragments had been stripped of its silvered silk casing.

"I've enough for twenty raincoats," one looter exclaimed as he loaded an automobile with yards of the covering.

In addition to looting, malicious vandalism interfered with work of the investigators. Several of the gas shells, which cost $15,000 had been ripped by the jackknife of some farmer's boy.

Commander Klein broke into anger as he saw the malicious destruction of the beauty of the air which he had once commanded.

"I wish they'd understand, these people, that they've got lots of things which are worthless to them, but invaluable to me. I must have the ship's log, the barograph and the radio record to help me find out what happened."

A chance remark dropped in a barber shop and overheard by a reporter traced the radio records. A map was found thru the efforts of the local druggists. Friday a detachment of regulars from Fort Hayes arrived and guarded the property.

Around them swarmed the thousands who motored thru the dusty country roads of the sparsely settled country to view the catastrophe.

From the sightseers, the farmers reaped a financial harvest. Admission was charged to rugged sheep pastures from which the wreck could be viewed. Concessionaires established hot dog and tonic booths. Parking space jumped from nothing to a half dollar and then to a dollar.

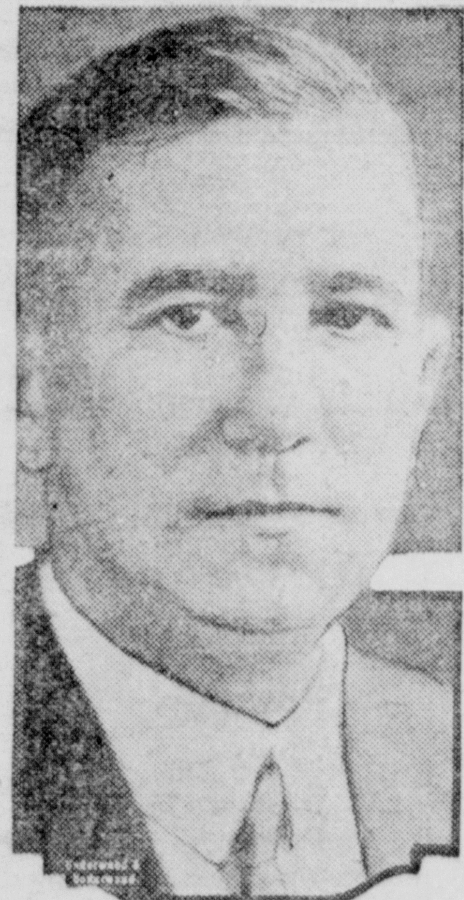

Only one group of natives was financially despondent. Those were the backers of the county fair. The prize oxen and milk cows went unnoticed as all the little world of farmers here centered about the two scenes of the wreck.

Commander Klein, four other officers and the village coroner gathered in the garage of Belle Valley. There in a temporary morgue lay the bodies of fourteen victims.

The officers identified bodies of brother officers and those of men who had served under them. The entire ceremony lasted no longer than twenty minutes.

Then came the verdict. "Death in the line of duty, not due to misconduct."

SEE OHIO FIRST SHOW PRIDE IN BUCKEYE STATE

Fine Thing to Appreciate the Beauty of the Section in Which You Live.

There are many tourists who will travel thousands of miles and very likely visit many foreign countries, who have not seen some notable sights in their own home locality. Very likely they have not traveled thoroughly over their own state, and do not know much about its resources and beauties.

This may not be the case so much now as it was in the days before automobiles became common, as the possession of a car does incite people to cover the distances which can be reached by trips of a day or a week end from their homes. Still, the tendency of such trips is usually to follow along the best automobile roads, and interesting localities where the roads are just ordinary may be entirely unknown.

We all ought to have a kind of state loyalty that should make us very proud of Ohio. We ought to know it, if possible, from end to end and be familiar with all its leading communities, and with their resources and history and achievements and possibilities.

There are some commonwealths where that sentiment is developed in a very marked way, and those states have made remarkable growth during recent years. The people of those states are so ardent in their loyalty that they want to know what is going on all over their state, so that they can speak intelligently about its prospects, and not have to express by mere hot air and indiscriminating enthusiasm, if they are asked to give an opinion about this or that locality.

It is a fine thing to appreciate the beauty of your own section and neighborhood. It is very enjoyable, of course, to travel widely and meet people from different sections. Yet that costs a good deal of money and one can see great deal that is very wonderful and beautiful by short journeys. —Newark Advocate.

FIRE LOSS AT MID WEST BOX PAPER MILLS

Blaze Probably Started From
Lighted Match Carelessly
Thrown in Yard.

The fire that broke out in the ricks of baled straw at the yards of the Mid-West Box and Paper mill Friday noon was the most stubborn fire that the department has had to fight in its existence.

The flames started in a portion of the yard adjacent to Mill street at noon and fanned by a wind from the southwest, it ate its way to two ricks of baled straw containing over two thousand tons. Both the booster and the big pumper played six streams of water on the fire all afternoon and finally succeeded in getting it under control, altho it will probably burn for a week. The fire was confined to the two ricks.

Superintendent Charles Raney and a force of men, assisted the department in handling the hose and controlling the big blaze. The heat was intense and this added to the sun's temperature made the place a fiery furnace. Both fire fighting machines were in service, and the water supply was drawn from the company's big well. The company has an intake from the river and the capacity of the mill's big pumps was put to their full capacity.

Chief Baer also had a line of hose connected with the city's supply. Mayor Fitzpatrick was at the scene, gave directions and ordered down the big pumper to assist.

Superintendent Raney is of the opinion that one of the men in leaving work at noon thoughtlessly threw down a lighted match which he had used to light a cigaret and that the blaze once started was fanned by the wind and crept up to the big ricks of straw, which are piled fifty feet high. This theory is borne out by the fact that when the men engaged in piling straw left the yards, there was no smoke visible, but hardly five minutes had elapsed when smoke was seen issuing from the piles of straw. The big ricks were pulled down so the fire fighters could reach the flames which seemed to break out everywhere.

Superintendent Raney estimates the loss at $10,000 fully covered by insurance.

FRATERNITY IN RELIGION FINE QUALITY

In the work of assembling funds for the restoration of the old mission at Santa Barbara that was badly damaged in the earthquake a few weeks ago, sectarian lines have been wiped out. Protestants and Jews are co-operating with Catholics in making possible the replacing of the historic structure just as it stood before the disaster.

The spirit of tolerance that is being manifested in this splendid co-operative work cannot fail to advance the cause of brotherhood and religion throughout the state of California. It will create a new respect for the religious forces generally. By uniting in this campaign, the people of the various faiths in California are showing the same sort of spirit shown by the people in New York in contributing to the fund for the completion of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. Both of these cooperative efforts may be accepted as signs of developing spirit of religious unity among the American people.—Houston Post-Dispatch.

AIR TRANSPORT COMPANY WILL HAUL FREIGHT

Cleveland, O., Sept. 5 (UP).—Work on the Cleveland Junction of the Chicago-New York air route of the $10,000,000 National Airways Transport company, Inc., will start within a month, it was announced here today.

The corporation will erect their buildings adjoining their mail landing field at the Cleveland Airport in Brook park.

The company will institute a freight express and airmail line, according to Col. Paul Henderson, vice president of the company. It has ordered ten planes and will bid on the airmail routes now advertised by the government, Henderson said.

BADLY SCALDED.

While in the act of taking a pan of boiling water off the stove Friday afternoon Mrs. E. A. Allen of 211 South Scioto street, slipped and spilled the hot water on both her legs. The water ran into her shoes and she was severely scalded. The pain was made more intense by the fact that she had some difficulty in pulling off her hose before she could get relief. Home remedies were applied at once to the burns. Her condition is now better and she is recovering nicely.

Society Suggestion
I am obliged to a man named Cunningham for sending me a copy of a weekly newspaper printed in a town in the Southwest. It says the bachelors of the town had long been in the habit of attending social affairs given by the young married people, and caused a good deal of trouble. Several young couples separated as a result of "romance." Whereupon the young married men made a new ruling, and now the bachelors, when they long for society, find it among the unmarried. A married man, if disposed to flirt, finds a restraining influence in his wife, but a bachelor has no such handicap. I should say an old bachelor should be permitted no lady company save that of widows, who, of all women, are most capable in handling old bachelors.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Foolishness of Fear Set Forth by Writer

"I'm afraid — I'm afraid — I'm afraid!" A million times a day we say it—"I'm afraid!" And then we wonder why we have so little success and so little happiness!

If you spend your whole life looking for safety, then you'll get safety perhaps, and you'll find out how little it amounts to.

Safety isn't success and it isn't happiness. Safety is a negative thing. It isn't worth a bean by itself. It's not getting hurt—that's all. Yet millions of people waste their whole lives trying to be safe.

The world of business is filled with fears. It is filled with people who are hiding—dodging—running for dear life.

In business life, as well as on the battlefield, men have shellshock and spasms of fear—blind, mad, unreasonable fear.

Most business men have these spasms of fear in times of depression. Then they cancel orders and sack employees, and stop advertising and dig themselves in.

Generally it is not what does happen that frightens men, but what might happen. Most men squeal before they are hurt.

The truth is that no man can escape either criticism or risk. You can never be blameless and you can never be safe, so why worry about it.

Face your fears. Walk toward them. And you'll be surprised to see how small and weak they are.

Do what you're afraid to do.

Be brave enough to buy in a slump. Be brave enough to sell in a boom. And you'll have to hire a taxi to take your profits home.

If you are in trouble, always ask: "What is the worst that can happen?" You'll usually find that the worst is not so terrible.

Courage! It is the rarest and most precious of all our real possessions. It is not taught in schools nor in churches. Every man must learn it for himself.

Danger is a tonic. It is a necessity of the inner life. You can never learn to be a good loser until you lose.

So here are unanswerable reasons why you should adopt this tip as one of the rules of your life—get rid of fear. No one can hurt you if you are true to yourself.—Herbert N. Casson in Forbes Magazine.

The Adult

We adults forget. Food and drink and sleep are the realities to us. To us there is a yesterday; there will be a tomorrow. I try to go back into the dim and vasty past, but I do not find myself there. I am an adult. I have discovered philosophies that never burdened the sweet conscious honesty of childhood. I have discovered obstacles intervening between me and my God. The road to Paradise is no longer short and straight and shining; it winds among the shadows and may not lead to Paradise after all.

Complexities have entered into that gentle relationship between life and myself that had no existence in the days of babyhood. A hundred hands, atavistic and primitive, pull me in a hundred different directions; mocking voices, stilled in childhood, hurl repeated questions in my puzzled ears. Along that road to babyhood I do not find the child I was; I find only my present self. Knowledge of things I may have gained, but only a great bewilderment as to life itself.—Arthur Somers Roche in Heart's International-Cosmopolitan.

Air Mails and Ireland

Every proposal for the inauguration of an air mail service is welcome, if for no other reason than because it turns thought away from the use of airplanes for war purposes. Hence the announcement that it is hoped to start such a service between Belfast, Ireland, and England in March next is especially gratifying because it may also tend to cement the two peoples more closely together. It is said that already two airplanes have been purchased and that a third has been ordered. With these it is intended to carry on an all-the-year-round service. This will enable letters posted in Belfast in the evening to be delivered in London by the first mail in the morning, and vice versa.—Montreal Herald.

Tax to Support Science

Commerce and industry will be required to contribute to the financial support of a scientific research in France, if a measure passed by the chamber of deputies is also approved by the senate. The bill provides for a tax of five centimes on each 100 francs paid in salaries by industrial and commercial concerns. The sum which the tax would raise for French scientific laboratories is estimated at 14,000,000 francs a year. This is about $700,000, according to the present rate of exchange.

Corrects Receding Chins

Receding chins are now being fixed by New York surgeons. By means of a special plate, it is possible to throw the lower jaw forward, so that the molar teeth meet in their proper position. This plate has the effect of making the patient bite forward, with the result, in most cases, that the receding chin eventually becomes normal.

Boom in Italy On

People in Italy are just meeting their accumulated needs which had remained unsatisfied during and since the war, and this is giving the country its present prosperity.

Among Materials for Fall Season

Rough Woolens, Panne and Pile Velvets, Crepes Are Prominent.

There may be and is a certain amount of speculation concerning the styles of the crisp tomorrows, but the fabrics are fairly well determined. Materials, of course, according to a fashion authority in the New York Herald-Tribune, have always been established before the rest of the mode, but the more complex weaves and designs of recent seasons make the fabric the first consideration by several months of every new group of styles. For this autumn two inter-related facts stand forth as characteristic of the new materials—first the domination of the sports influence and secondly the distinctly English atmosphere about many of the new cloths.

Meyer et Cie have an attractive array of rough-surfaced woolens, usually combined with silks and having a delicious velvety nap. This house is darkening the spring colors—bois du rose, mauve, raspberry (framboise), reseda and sage greens, bright navy and nattier blue, some beige and dull orange and a little black being most prominent. They make a satin-surfaced wool out of goat's hair and silk for sports, calling it capria.

Rodier, as always, has an interesting collection of autumn materials. Kasha is replaced by kasha natte, a loosely woven cloth with the beautiful cashmere weave of kasha. This artist in cloth is creating some lovely kasha duvetyns that are shaded from top to bottom for coats and dresses. One beautiful piece is shaded from black-red to pale rose, another from deep bottle green to pale sea green, and so on. The printed materials, all in one color, show their motifs very large at the bottom and gradually become smaller until at the top they are quite tiny.

Many of the new Rodier materials for winter have futuristic borders in dull colors, and his kasha is gorgeously ornamented with flowers and motifs more conventional, done in gold or silver thread. Burafyl, the beautiful French interpretation of English men's wear worsted, is being made by Rodier for many autumn sports suits, which have been made into fall garments by the Paris couturiers. Pellisine, a suede-finished cashmere, is a beautiful new Rodier fabric, and this house has also many new materials with damask patterns in faint lines of white on wool. Among the colors very dark Veronese green, a full range of blue, many grays and a deep wine red stand forth most prominently.

Belted Waist, Petticoat Among Season's Fashions

One of the novelties incidental to the belted waist is the petticoat. This is an important revival which will have a distinct effect upon the dress silhouette. For several seasons the trend in the costume has been altogether toward elimination, and lingerie has been reduced to a minimum. Petticoats have been dispensed with almost wholly since the silk slip was introduced and the waistline lost. With the new scheme of things are being shown a great many pretty styles in petticoats. Most of these are of crepe de chine or of tub silk, and some are embroidered, done in fine needlework of one sort or another, or trimmed with lace in dainty frills and variations. It is most desirable to have a petticoat match the dress in color, but some exceedingly pretty shades, suitable to be worn with several frocks, and much white and black, are seen.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

Long Journey for Nothing

This is the story of an absent-minded professor. But among stories about absent-minded professors it must hold high place. The professor is J. E. Aderman. He teaches at the University of Sidney, in Australia. Recently he arrived in London as one of the delegates to the congress of the empire universities. Then Professor Aderman discovered an error. At first he was slightly puzzled, then alarmed and then probably as humorously embarrassed as it is good for a man ever to be humorously embarrassed. He found that he had miscalculated by a year the opening of the universities' congress and that it will not open till June, 1926. Professor Aderman traveled 24,000 miles before he discovered his error.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

Gambler Knew How to Repay the Kindness
By AUGUSTUS SHERWIN
(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"FIFTY against the dog!" shouted Matteo the marksman.

"Taken," in a mere careless drawl came the reply from Arvidi, the gambler.

It was a typical Mexican scene—the interior of the chief gambling den at Truro and a critical stage of the game in progress.

Marvin Howe happened to be present amid the swarthy crew—a floating quantity in the general situation involving warfare, anxious to get North and out of it, and the opportunity just that day with a decidedly favorable change in fortune if he carried out secret instructions given to him.

The position was this: The commandant of the sectional insurgents wished to send a particular message to a co-patriot one hundred miles away. It involved a junction of the two forces. The intermediate forty leagues of territory, however, were occupied by a dangerous enemy. The chief at Truro was surrounded by enemies and spies. He had hired Howe to do some translation and had confidence in him.

Howe engaged to cross the danger line and deliver his message. He was to try and find some free lance who would accompany him and bring back a reply, while he, well rewarded, returned to home, friends and fiancée—Nellie Duryea, the only Nellie in the world to him beyond the unsettled border line.

Howe had thought of Matteo and that was why he was now an inmate of the noisy gambling den.

Howe had found him at the card table pitting his money recklessly against the most daring gambler in Truro. Howe saw his last dollar go. A handsome ring was staked, then his watch and now his most faithful friend and companion, the dog. Everybody who knew Matteo knew also his dog. The animal was tiny, but fearless and very intelligent.

The cards went the rounds again. Matteo lost. Howe saw a strangely desperate glint in his eye as he arose unsteadily from the table. He turned slightly pale. Then he shrugged his shoulders and walked over and kissed the little dog asleep on a pile of newspapers. Straight as a soldier then, he walked from the room.

"It will break his heart to lose his friend," Howe told Arvidi quickly. "May I redeem him?" and he proffered fifty dollars in paper money.

"All right," nodded the gambler and then Howe snatched up the dog and rushed after his master. Howe overtook him at the street door.

"Yours," he said, placing the little pet in his arms.

Matteo stared at Howe in a dazed, uncertain way. Then his fingers gently caressed the dog. His voice broke as he comprehended what Howe had done.

"Amigo," he said, holding Howe's hand in a fervent grasp, "when my fortune turns I shall know how to repay you."

"I can help it turn just now," remarked Howe significantly. He told him that he was authorized to pay royally for his guidance and direction.

"I can pilot you safely," Matteo said—"I am your man."

The morning they left Truro Howe had noticed a man he had seen hanging around the chief's quarters dogging his footsteps. He had called the attention of Matteo to this, who had carelessly asserted that if he was one of the numerous spies in action they "would soon lose him."

However, twice in two days after they had started on the trail they caught sight of a distant figure reminding of the man they had observed at Truro.

It was early in the morning that Matteo suggested a plunge into a near creek before they lit a little fire and cooked their frugal breakfast. They had disrobed and were disporting themselves in the cool, sparkling stream, when an ominous sound echoed out—

Click!

Then, to the consternation of Howe, turning, he saw a man, the man who had shadowed him in the city, just rushing away with a camera.

"Matteo!" shouted Howe, quickly—"the spy. He has photographed the message on my back!"

"So?" observed Matteo, speedily springing ashore to where his clothes lay. It was to seize his revolver.

Crack!—followed a sure, steady aim.

Crack!—a second sharp explosion followed. Dropping the wrecked camera and holding his wounded hand, the spy disappeared.

"The message is written partly in cypher," explained Howe, "but that man might have been able to make it out after close study."

"He is doubtless one of the unscrupulous crowd infesting the province, ready to blackmail, sell secrets or betray his best friend," acceded Matteo.

They reached the end of their journey in safety and the secret message was transcribed.

Matteo returned to Truro with a rich reward awaiting him. Marvin Howe crossed the border, bound for home and his waiting fiancée, pretty Nellie Duryea.

There Spoke Envy's Voice

The town drunkard of a small Scotch community went on an especially vehement tear. The village authorities locked him up until he had entirely recovered.

On the second day of his captivity, as he sat in his cell, thirsty beyond words, the minister, who was of a full habit of life, came to give him consolation and good advice.

They sat down side by side and the dominie read the parable of the Prodigal Son. The prisoner seemed to hang on the words. He nudged up closer and closer, bending forward until his face was almost in the minister's face, and listened.

"Please read it over once more," he said when the dominie had finished the chapter and started to close the Good Book.

Touched by this further sign of penitence, the minister read it again.

"Tell me, poor man," he said when he was done, "what was it held you so close the while I was reading—was it the lesson of the Scripture or was it the words?"

"Nay, nay," said the tippler—" 'twas your grand breath!"

SON SUES HIS FATHER FOR AN ACCOUNTING

John K. Zurmehly - Is Not Satisfied With Administration of Trust Fund.

John R. Zurmehly, son of Guy L. Zurmehly, Wednesday, by his attorney, Wilby G. Hyde, sued his father for a balance of $11,150.98, which the son claims is due him from the father as the son's guardian over and above the balance of $5,488.62, as given in the father's seventh and final account. The entire amount sought is $16,639.60, which is the total of the father's reported balance and the additional sum of $11,150.98 claimed by the son.

The son says, that on Nov. 5, 1908, when he was 6 years old, his father was appointed his guardian. On Sept. 5, 1923, the son attained his majority. The property under the guardianship was a distributive share in the estate of Henry S. Tootle, consisting of 84.41 acres of land in Deerfield township, near Clarksburg.

The son says his father as his guardian, filed seven accounts and he claims that all these accounts were fraudulent and contained manifest mistakes; that his (the son's) allowance and confirmation of the accounts being based on his acceptance of them on his father's word, without investigation by himself, due to the natural confidential relations between himself and his father, were also erroneous, being based on his father's alleged fraud.

The son further claims that his father co-mingled the son's money with his own, and used it for his (the father's) benefit; also that the father did not charge himself correctly on the interest account, or on the rent account for the use of the son's property.

The son therefore asks that the accounts be opened up, set aside and held for naught and that his father be charged with, and ordered to pay the true balance to the son, with interest.—Chillicothe Gazette.

Flies Are Polite

Julian Huxley, eminent biologist, says flies are polite. A fly in a box was seen to devour a small insect, but when a female fly was placed in the box with it the next insect was killed by the male and given to his mate. Even after the female was removed, the male remembered his manners by catching another insect and saving it for the "wife."

RIO GRANDE RIVER ON RAMPAGE

El Paso, Texas, Sept. 3.—(U.P.)—Five hundred persons were temporarily homeless in El Paso and vicinity today as a result of the Rio Grande breaking through its levees after a rise which exceeded that of last month. A side current two feet deep was running through the Mexican quarter here at 10 o'clock today, five blocks from the river's bed. Three outlying additions are flooded.

The American Red Cross, the Mexican Blue Cross, city and county officials, and rental agencies are providing relief for the sufferers.

Soldiers from Fort Bliss are guarding homes of refugees to prevent looting.

Most damage has been done by backwater and not more than forty homes have been wrecked. These were built of adobe.

The flood waters began receding in the city this morning and flood squads turned their attention to lower valley farming sections where much damage is anticipated when the crest of the flood reaches there.

ABSCONDING BANKER

Caught In Lone Star State—Is Enroute To Middleboro, Ky.

San Antonio, Texas, Sept. 3.—(U.P.)—Taken from a bridal suite in a fashionable hotel here with his woman companion, W. E. Frazer, alias W. E. Farley, 37, is on his way back to Middleboro, Ky., in charge of Houston Ball, chief of police of Middleboro. Frazer is charged with absconding from the Citizens Bank and Trust Company of Middleboro with money and securities totaling $100,000 in value. He was cashier of the bank.

Frazer was traced in his movements through correspondence of his woman companion with her relatives. They were endeavoring to reach Mexico. The former banker left a wife and two children in Middleboro.

The woman's residence was in Lexington, Ky., although she had told officers she was the daughter of a wealthy Virginia lumber man.

About $40,000 of the securities were recovered in a safety box in a local bank. Frazer said he had bought three expensive automobiles since absconding from Middleboro July 11.

The $1,000 reward for Frazer's arrest was paid to Chief of Detectives Sam Street here.

Prince Sleeps in Park; Hopes to Win Rich Wife

Budapest.—Police seized an old man in rags who passed the night in a park sleeping on a bench, and from his papers he was found to be the former Prince Alexander Hohenloe-Oehringen.

He had been wandering from one cheap place to another until he received help from a washerwoman, who gave him food and shelter out of pity. Meanwhile he asked a lawyer to find a rich wife for him, but the lawyer's endeavors were not successful.

Ex-Prince Hohenloe-Oehringen formerly served as colonel of a Bavarian cavalry regiment. In 1895 he married against his family's will; he had to renounce his right as Prince Hohenloe. The marriage was dissolved during the war. He left the German army and married in Vienna a second time, but his wife left him, it is alleged, in consequence of his having squandered her money.
